Department, they state that the delays necessary to such revision would result in confusion and obstruct the operations of the Government. The act of 1817 abolished the offices of accountants of the War and Navy Departments and superintendent general of military supplies, and restored the settlement of accounts to the Treasury Department. This act also created the Second Comptroller, the Second, Third, and Fourth Auditors, and transferred the appropriations for clerk hire in the offices of the accountants of the War and Navy Departments and the superintendent general of military supplies to the auditors offices, with the duties which they had been performing, thus making it clearly the Intention of the act to dispense with all administrative examination of accounts. Other important changes made in the accounting system were the establishment in 1812 of the General Land Office, with an auditing branch in which all land accounts were settled, and the transfer of the General L, and Office to the Interior Department, established in 1849, in which the law authorized the continuance of the same audit; and in both cases the accounts passed from the audit in the administrative office directly to the First Comptroller for review. The next important change was made by the act of 1836, under which the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department was established, the act making his decision final and conclusive except upon appeal to the first comptroller. Again in 1849 the office of Commissioner of Customs...
