Excerpt: . . . models and the volumetric-flow analytical model. More reasonable capture zones, parallel to the regional flow direction, were produced by the numerical models than the volumetric-flow equation. The numerical model RESSQC computed more realistic capture zones than the numerical model MWCAP by considering the effects of multiple-well interference. Capture zones predicted by both numerical and analytical models indicate that the current 100-foot radius of protection around a wellhead in South Carolina is much smaller than the ground water capture for pumping wells in this particular wellfield in the Upper Floridan. The arbitrary fixed radius of 100 feet underestimated the upgradient contribution of ground water flow to a pumped well. Moore, Beth A. 1993. Case studies in wellhead protection area delineation and monitoring. USEPA Report 600 R-93 107. A methodology for planning and implementing a wellhead protection monitoring program is formulated and demonstrated at unique case study sites. This methodology emphasizes saturated zone monitoring and is intended to serve as a...
